'A-Blackmail' Warning Is Puzzle to Specialists

By Murrey Marder Staff Reporter

President Johnson's pledge that the United States will this: support non-nuclear nations that are threatened with "nu-seek national nuclear weapons are variously called "free some significant implications our strong support against for the future.

The President's statement was made in his Sunday night report to the Nation on the dramatic shakeup in the Kremlin and Communist China's first nuclear blast.

On the surface, what the President promised in terms of American aid to threatened nations generally was regarded as an unexceptional President's phasing. He did ple, already operates outside statement. But its subsurface not specify "free world" or implications have become a "non-Communist" nations, Question of Albania subject of controversy and puzzlement for many foreign policy specialists.

India Reassured

The widespread impression was that the President was the public record, even after giving new assurance to the one nationally syndicated colnon-Communist nations in Asia, such as India and Japan, President's remark reprethat might feel menaced by sented an "impulsive act." The Red China's first nuclear blast. President's statement will

That impression was reinforced by comments made by said, as it was delivered. State Department officials.

If the President was declaring now be counted as an element some large, new American nu- of deliberate ambiguity in the interest of the United States clear defense doctrine that President's remark: could apply to any nation Communist or non-Communist, the President's pledge to at this point just how imthat does not possess its own nuclear weapons.

President may have misspoken nations from leaping into the apparently depends on events unintentionally ambiguous pons in the belief that it is language.

What the President said was

"The nations that do not clear blackmail" may contain can be sure that if they need world" or "non-Communist" some threat of nuclear blackmail, then they will have it."

Because the President was discussing Communist China and Asia in the preceding portions of his remarks, public explanations of his intent placed his "nuclear blackmail" comment in that con-

Literally, however, there was no such limitation on the which is the usual semantic practice in Government statements of that nature.

Administration sources declined yesterday to make any statement of amplification on umnist publicly asked if the stand on the record, officials

There appear to be the fol-Others, however, wondered lowing reasons for what must come to the aid of nations portant the President's statethreatened with nuclear black-ment may become in future Still others asked if the mail was to discourage other American foreign policy. That their only means of selfdefense in a nuclear age.

Under present circumstances the President's pledge applies most directly to what nations.

But the President and his advisers chose to avoid such terminology. Their language left the possibility that at some point in the future a Communist nation might want to break from Moscow's or Peking's fold and seek protection under the American nuclear umbrella if threatened with nuclear blackmail. Communist Yugoslavia, for exam-

Question of Albania

Does this mean that a country like Communist Albania, which follows Peking's line, could claim United States protection if it were threatened with nuclear attack by the Soviet Union? Informal sources reply that the question is "too hypothetical" to warrant a specific response.

Equally, no official wants to specify now just what nations are in, and what nations are out, of the embrace of the American pledge. It is said that it would not be in the to make such a delineation. The major purpose behind Nor does anyone want to say his intentions, by the use of production of nuclear wea-that no one can now forecast.